

December 3, 2008

Dear President-elect Obama:

As leaders of organizations dedicated to the support and advancement of women and girls and their families, we congratulate you on your historic victory and the promise it holds – not only for our shared values but the nation as a whole. The gender gap was alive and thriving in this year's election; we believe the unmistakable support of women voters has given you a tremendous opportunity to make women's issues a clear priority of your administration. This is a cause that we know you support, and we stand ready to work with you to advance our mutual agenda.

We are looking forward to working with you and your administration to achieve historic levels of appointments of talented, visionary women at all levels of the executive branch. We were pleased to see the nominations of Hillary Clinton for Secretary of State, Janet Napolitano for Secretary of Homeland Security, and Susan Rice for Ambassador to the United Nations. Moreover, we appreciate the appointments of highly-qualified women to key administration positions, including, most recently, Melody Barnes, Christina Romer and Ellen Moran. With these and other pending appointments and nominations, you have shown your willingness to name women to important posts. We applaud and thank you for these efforts.

We urge you to strengthen these efforts, and extend them even further both with regard to the makeup of your cabinet and other political appointments. Women have made tremendous strides in becoming top decision makers in both public service and private enterprise. Even so, few women in American history have been given the honor of serving their country in a president's cabinet. As the aforementioned nominees demonstrate, there are many qualified and accomplished women willing and able to lead our executive departments and agencies; your administration would be wise to grant more of them such an opportunity. We urge you to appoint more women than your predecessors to your Cabinet.

As you know, achieving gender equity goes beyond appointing women to government offices; it extends to putting policies and regulations in place which confront problems head-on and generate long-lasting solutions. Toward that end, we further ask you to restore and strengthen all offices that in past administrations have played a fundamental role in protecting and advancing women's issues and opportunities. For example, the White House Office for Women's Initiatives and Outreach and the President's Interagency Council on Women once served as proactive liaisons to the women's community, promoted interagency collaboration to address critical issues, and furthered policy initiatives to advance women's progress. Reestablishing and strengthening these and other offices would send a strong signal and provide a platform for the development and implementation of new ideas.

It has taken centuries of hard work and sustained hope to get women where we are today, but much more work needs to be done. Lost ground must be regained, and new doors must be opened. You have called on Americans for bold solutions to our challenges. We have heard your call, and stand ready to work with you and your administration to advance equity for women and girls.

Sincerely,
